The thread of the film will be common, but each person will have to give part of the story.

In the end, the story will have to be consistent from start to finish

When writing is complete, you will be divided into three teams:

- The film director team: composed of the film director, the script director, etc...
- The technical team: Composed of a cameraman, a sound engineer, etc...
- The talent team: composed of the actors.

Each group will assign the tasks within its team and start to prepare, during all this time you will of course be accompanied by a team professionals who will guide you through the various steps.

The final step will be the ... shoot!

Roll sound, roll camera, it's rolling... and action!

The three groups will have to work together and learn the craft. Before each scene, you'll have a few minutes of preparation and coordination after this time, it will be time to shoot the next scene, whether you are ready or not, the schedule in the movie world is important!
